Quick Facts about Young Voters in the District of Columbia: The Midterm Election Year 2006

By Mark Hugo Lopez, Karlo Barrios Marcelo, and Jared Sagoff<sup>1</sup>
Updated June 2007

The 2006 midterm election was the second major election in a row that saw an increase in the electoral participation of young people ages 18-29. Between 2002 and 2006, the percentage of eligible young people who voted increased by 3 percentage points to 25 percent, the single largest increase among all age groups nationally.<sup>2</sup> However, while youth electoral participation improved between 2002 and 2006 nationally, in Washington, D.C., the youth voter turnout rate fell 3 percentage points from 32 percent in 2002 to 29 percent in 2006. Overall, Washington, D.C. ranked 19th (tied with GA) among all states and the Washington, D.C. in 2006, down from 5th in 2002, yet was 4 percentage points higher than the nation as a whole.

This fact sheet reports the characteristics of young voters for the state of Washington, D.C., including estimates of the number of young voters, and voter turnout rates in 2006 and 2002 for various sub-groups of young people.
