By Mark Hugo Lopez, Karlo Barrios Marcelo, and Jared Sagoff¹
Updated June 2007

The 2006 midterm election was the second major election in a row that saw an increase in the electoral participation of young people ages 18-29. Between 2002 and 2006, the percentage of eligible young people who voted increased by 3 percentage points to 25 percent, the single largest increase among all age groups nationally.² Similarly, while youth electoral participation improved between 2002 and 2006 nationally, in Maine, the youth voter turnout rate rose 1 percentage point from 31 percent in 2002 to 22 percent in 2006. Overall, Maine ranked 9th (tied with MO, OR, and VA) among all states and the District of Columbia in 2006, down from 6th in 2002, yet was seven percentage points higher than the nation as a whole.
