IN-DEPTH ANALYSIS OF YOUTH VOTE IN VIRGINIA

Senator Warner’s Support from Young Virginia Voters Drops 21 Points from 2008
CIRCLE Analysis Shows Warner’s 50% of Youth Vote on Tuesday Was a Dramatic Drop from the 71% He Received in 2008

Medford/Somerville, MA – Youth vote experts from the Center for Information and Research on Civic Learning & Engagement (CIRCLE) – the preeminent, non-partisan research center on youth engagement based at Tufts University’s Jonathan M. Tisch College of Citizenship and Public Service – today released in-depth analysis on youth voters in Virginia during Tuesday’s highly competitive U.S. Senate election in the state.

In a wave election for the GOP, in which Republicans won the youth vote in some states, young voters (ages 18-29) in Virginia gave incumbent U.S. Senator Mark Warner (D-VA) 50% of their votes. That 50% in Tuesday’s election is significantly less than the 71% Warner won from young voters in his 2008 campaign. In yesterday’s election, young voters supported Republican challenger Ed Gillespie by 39% and Libertarian candidate Robert Sarvis by 11%.

“In an unexpectedly close call for the incumbent Democrat, Senator Warner received only 50% of the youth vote in the state during Tuesday’s election,” said Peter Levine, Director of CIRCLE and Associate Dean of Tisch College. “This was a dramatic 21 percentage point drop from the 71% he received from voters aged 18-29 during his 2008 election.”

Virginia has 1.2 million young citizens in the state that are ages 18-29. For additional state-specific data on young voters in Virginia, please visit here.

The U.S. Senate election in Virginia was considered a “competitive” race in 2014. In states with “competitive” Senate races in 2014, youth voter turnout was an estimated 26.8%, compared to 17.0% in states with highly-favored or safe Republican candidates, and 23.4% in safely Democratic states.

Today, CIRCLE has also released an exclusive, national youth turnout estimate showing that at least 10 million young Americans between the ages of 18 and 29 cast a ballot in Tuesday’s elections across the country — a turnout rate of 21.5%. The number of young voters in Tuesday’s election is comparable to the turnout seen in other, recent midterm elections. In 2010, the two-day youth turnout estimate was 20.9%, or around 9.2 million young people.
“In terms of both youth turnout and vote choice, 2014 looks like a typical midterm election year as far as youth are concerned. Young people made up a similar proportion of voters in 2010,” said Peter Levine, Director of CIRCLE and Associate Dean of Tisch College. “Although this was a wave election for the GOP, youth still tended to vote Democratic. In the national exit poll data on House races, 18 to 29-year-olds preferred Democratic candidates by 54% to 43%.”

For a full breakdown of the youth vote turnout, as well as historical data comparisons and further sourcing information for the data, please visit here. Further information on the youth share of the electorate can be found here. CIRCLE will release additional analysis of the youth vote over the next week.

 To speak to CIRCLE’s youth vote experts for interviews and/or analysis throughout the week, please contact: Kristofer Eisenla at kristofer@lunaeisenliamedia.com or 202-670-5747

Throughout this election season, CIRCLE’s 2014 Election Center has offered myriad new products providing comprehensive analysis of young voters, both nationally and in targeted states and congressional districts across the country. Some of these products include: an Interactive Congressional District Map and Interactive State-by-State Voting Map; as well as The Youth Vote in 2014: Congressional House Races to Watch and 2014 Midterms: Young Voters in Competitive Senate Races.

###

CIRCLE (www.civicyouth.org) is a nonpartisan, independent, academic research center that studies young people in politics and presents detailed data on young voters in all 50 states. CIRCLE is part of the Jonathan M. Tisch College of Citizenship and Public Service at Tufts University.

The Jonathan M. Tisch College of Citizenship and Public Service (http://activecitizen.tufts.edu/) is a national leader whose model and research are setting the standard for higher education’s role in civic engagement education. Serving every school of Tufts University, Tisch College creates an enduring culture that prepares students to be lifelong active citizens.

Tufts University (http://www.tufts.edu/), located on three Massachusetts campuses in Boston, Medford/Somerville and Grafton, and in Talloires, France, is recognized as one of the premier research universities in the United States. Tufts enjoys a global reputation for academic excellence and for the preparation of students as leaders in a wide range of professions. A growing number of innovative teaching and research initiatives span all Tufts campuses, and collaboration among the faculty and students in the undergraduate, graduate, and professional programs across the university’s schools is widely encouraged.